Further information

"St George's was ... enlarged with a chancel in 1874. The district became hopelessly dreary, and the church was not needed." (from 'Parish Churches of London', Basil F L Clarke, Batsford, 1966).

Despite Clarke's comment, and damage in World War 2, the church remained in use until closed in 1953, then leased to a theatrical agency for storage until destroyed by fire in 1960. The bell was re-hung in the replacement church (BAT09).

The site was sold to Regent Lion Investments Ltd. and appears now to be part of an industrial estate. The parish was taken into Battersea, St George with St Andrew in 1944.
